

National Doctor's Day

Let us thank our doctors for their service, today and every day

India celebrates 1st July as 'National Doctor's Day,' commemorating the iconic Bharat Ratna, Dr. B. C. Roy, a renowned physician, a freedom fighter, an eminent educationist and a visionary politician.

As a pandemic-affected world struggles with the fight against the coronavirus, there is probably no better opportunity to express gratitude for our healthcare workers.

This pandemic has shown us how doctors risk their own lives and comforts, as well as those of their loved ones, to save and comfort others.

Let us remember the sacrifice that doctors have been making and honour their selfless contribution to society by saying...

Thank You!

In the eventuality of us or any of our family members requiring medical attention, we can resolve to:

- ✓ Provide relevant and detailed personal history honestly, without concealing any information. Be specific in our responses to the doctor's questions.
- ✓ Follow the doctor's advice with sincerity.
- ✓ Trust the doctor and seek clarifications directly, when required.
- ✓ Respect the doctor's time and efforts.
- ✓ Not self medicate.
- ✓ Not seek medical consultation casually or through informal communications.
- ✓ Not rely on online search engines (or family friend) for medical diagnosis and treatment.
